✓ THE FABLE OF
THE HATED RIVALS ✓

The frolicsome kiddies, Jack and Jill, see-saw contentedly until Tom pushomobiles into sight. Tom whistles an invitation offering a spin, and the little maid accepts. In her haste, she leaves Jack up in the air and he comes down with a thump. Jill and Tom speed away to the amusement park. The daring pair shoot up and down the loops of a lofty scenic railway until they coast into a lake. Then they skim over the water to the other shore and they land upon seats in the open air theatre. While a novelty dog act is on, a lion escapes from his cage and rushes upon the stage, and then leaps into the audience. Tom runs for dear life leaving poor little Jill upon the mercy of the savage beast. Left in the lurch by his little playmate, Jack has meandered into the vicinity of the amusement park. He hears the cries of, "Lion loose!" coming over the fence. A few moments later Tom rushes out of the gate; a second later Jill rushes out pursued by the lion. Immediately, Jack jumps upon his dog's back and rides to the rescue. The lion chases Jill out upon a high cliff. The little maid jumps off with the king of beasts after her. They land a-splash into a lake. Jack and his dog follow closely after. Little Jill swims frantically away from the lion. Jack comes to the surface and leaps from his dog to the back of the pursuing lion. Heroically, the boy grappels with the big beast and the two sink beneath the surface. They land upon the floor of the lake and the struggle continues---until Jack choaks the lion to death. When Jack comes to the surface again, he finds little Jill floating and he rescues her. He takes his little sweetheart into his arms and rides upon the dog, back to the place where the cowardly Tom is waiting. Jack returns Jill to Tom but the girl rushes back to her true hero. Jack and Jill are reunited and their jolly little romance continues as before.

Moral-"None but the brave deserve the fair.
